In the Gubernatorial Campaign

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Orval Faubus took some of the bitterest criticism of the current campaign at his two Democratic gubernatorial opponents yesterday, charging that if either Lee Ward or Chris Finkbeiner won the race, the Arkansas National Guard might be used "to knock people in the head" in a possible school integration crisis.

In a speech at Hope, Faubus asked:

"Have they told you one thing they would do at Central High School except that they would not do what I did?"

"Well," the governor continued, "there are only two choices. One is to use the Guard as I did to preserve the peace by keeping the school segregated. And that's the only way you can preserve the peace."

Faubus continued:

"They say they are not going to do that. They must be planning to take the National Guard and do what the federalists did—go ahead there and knock people in the head."

Apparently the governor referred to some clashes between federal paratroopers and members of a crowd outside Central High during the integration dispute last fall.

One civilian man was cut by a bayonet in a scuffle with a paratrooper and there were a number of other minor skirmishes.

Faubus said he had backed plans of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for "total integration" of the state.

"They were going to integrate us in every county and town and city," he asserted.

The governor struck again at Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, for criticizing him.

He said he sometimes suspected that anti-Faubus letters in the Gazette's columns were written by Ashmore "and his friends."

Faubus reiterated previous statements that out-of-state labor leaders had tried to intimidate the Central Trades and Labor Council at Camden after it endorsed him recently.

He said he confidently expected almost unanimous backing from union workers in Arkansas.

"They know in their hearts that I am sympathetic to them and have worked for their best interests," Faubus said.

Besides Hope, the governor's tour yesterday covered Ashdown, De Queen, Nashville and Prescott. Today he was scheduled to visit Lewisville, Bradley, Stamps, Magnolia, Stephens and El Dorado.

CHICAGO (AP) — Police broke up a fight Monday night between two men, one armed with a knife, his opponent with a bow and arrows.

Sgt. Victor Carlson and Police-man John Curtin said the trouble started when Charles Bates, 37, arrived to visit his former wife, Dorothy, 34, at the home of Eldon Carlson, 27, Carlson and Bates, police said, started arguing and Bates drew a knife.

Carlson got his bow and three steel-tipped arrows. As Bates started to drive away from Carlson's North Side home, Carlson hit Bates' car with one arrow.

At that time, Sgt. Carlson and Curtin drove up and took both men in. They were held for further questioning.

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Political futures are made or broken in campaign headquarters. There the strategy is plotted that may lead to election or defeat.

But in most cases, the candidate is a virtual stranger in his own headquarters.

"We see the governor once, maybe twice a week," said Arnold Sikes, campaign manager for Gov. Orval Faubus. "He's usually here for a short time on weekends. And sometimes he's here for a few minutes if he passes through Little Rock in the middle of the week."

Sikes, who serves Faubus as administrative aide during quiet hours when there is no campaign, maintains the activities of Faubus' workers are paid and volunteer.

Workers at Faubus' headquarters in the old Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation office on Markham Street in the same block are headquarters for the other two gubernatorial candidates—Judge Lee Ward in the Grady Manning Hotel and Chris Finkbeiner in the Capitol Hotel.

Activity in the Ward and Finkbeiner headquarters is less frantic and there are fewer personnel. But the atmosphere of concentration, of dedication to the election of the candidate is the same.

The joy of each headquarters is decorated with a giant portrait of the candidate and huge banners proclaiming "Lee Ward" or "Chris Finkbeiner for Governor."

Ward's headquarters, manned largely by volunteers, is directed by Jim Sloan of Jonesboro, the campaign manager. Noble Miller and Sherman Williams are joint chairmen of the Finkbeiner campaign and divide duties.

The literary for each candidate is in the same block are headquarters for the other two gubernatorial candidates—Judge Lee Ward in the Grady Manning Hotel and Chris Finkbeiner in the Capitol Hotel.

Finkbeiner Ward

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris Finkbeiner hit the gubernatorial campaign trail again today after time out at Little Rock to work up a major policy speech.

The candidate planned to visit Conway and a number of Faulkner County communities and make a stop at Booneville before returning to Little Rock late today.

Finkbeiner has requested 30 minutes of telecasting time over KARK-TV at Little Rock tomorrow night. A spokesman for the station said the program would start at 7:30 p. m.

At Finkbeiner's state headquarters an aide said the subject of the policy speech had not been disclosed.

Finkbeiner spent all day yesterday working on the speech.

Ward said this increase could be accomplished through the building of markets for farm products.

The Paragould chancellor told audiences at Nashville, Monroeville, Glenwood, Amity and Murfreesboro that his entire 7-point platform hinged on raising the income of the small farmer, the white collar worker and the small businessman.

Declaring that he and lots of others were tired of hearing Arkansas rated near or at the bottom of every survey, Ward added:

"We work, we plan, we pay taxes and yet we can't seem to get anywhere."

The judge deplored the expenditure of millions of dollars on improving educational facilities when "the sad fact is that as soon as we educate our young people they leave for other states where they can earn more money."

Ward said he offered a program that would reverse that trend.

Taking up the racial issue, Ward reiterated that he was a segregationist but nevertheless would leave integration policies in the hands of local school districts.

Although he eased up on criticism of Gov. Orval Faubus by name, Ward repeated several times that Arkansas was "without proper leadership."

The judge said this charge was borne out by events in the Little Rock school integration crisis.

"The third term candidate created a near riot and chaos here," Ward said. "When he got through the colored children remained in school and it cost the taxpayers an unnecessary five million dollars."

Obviously Ward referred to estimates of the cost of placing federal paratroopers and federalized state guardsmen at Central High.

Ward's campaign chart was marked for visits to Dierks, De Queen, Horatio, Foreman, Ashdown and Hope today.

Auto Sought in Murder at Stuttgart

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP) — An automobile linked to the slaying of a 42-year-old Stuttgart widow was found today at Wheatley, Sheriff Harold Woodson said.

The sheriff left for Wheatley to investigate.

Meanwhile police here planned to question a young girl who they might have witnessed the killing of Mrs. Nora Dillingham, mother of four whose bullet-riddled body was found in her parked car here yesterday.

Police Chief Harold Lammers declined to identify the teen-age girl.

"We may solve this case in a matter of hours," he said. "There may be an arrest today."

Officers have said they have information about the identity and motive of the slayer of the white nurse's aide.

A white woman is sought, Chief Lammers said.

State Police issued an all-points bulletin for a car occupied by two white women. A Negro woman told officers she saw a car with two women in it speeding away from the scene of the shooting.

Mrs. Dillingham was shot four times with a .32 caliber pistol.

The dead woman, a native of Humphrey, had worked at a hospital here since October, 1957. Her husband, a rice mill employee, died of a heart attack two years ago.

Survivors include two sons, Charles D. and L. J. Dillingham of Stuttgart; two daughters, Mrs. Edith Ann Powell of Texas and Flora Dillingham of Stuttgart, and a brother and sister.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rackets Committee is turning its spotlight on a $300,000 mystery — that of the missing Greenlease ransom money.

Committee counsel Robert P. Kennedy has confirmed a report by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat Monday that a number of St. Louisians who figured in the sensational kidnap-murder case during its missing money phase have been subpoenaed to appear before the committee.

The $300,000 is part of $800,000 that 6-year-old Bobby Greenlease's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenlease of Kansas City, paid kidnappers: Carl Austin Hall and Bonnie Brown Heady in 1953.

The other half was recovered. Kennedy said committee investigators have developed information that some union officials might know something about the money. But he said no more.

Kennedy said subpoenas have been issued for Joseph Costello, owner of the Ace Club of St. Louis, John Hager, former driver for the cab company; and Robert P. (Barney) Baker, a reputed aide of Teamster Union President James R. Hoffa.

Hager was the cab driver credited with giving police the tip that led to Hall's arrest. He picked up Hall in St. Louis in October 1953 after Bobby Greenlease had been slain.

Baker reportedly was trustee of the Teamsters cab drivers local in St. Louis during the case.

Hall and Mrs. Heady died together in Missouri's gas chamber Dec. 18, 1953.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Rackets probes heard testimony today that the old Capone mob has taken over "immense" Chicago labor unions, but that only failure and murder resulted in a mobster attempt to move in on Texas.

The grim story came in testimony from L. George Butler of the Dallas, Tex., police and Virgil W. Peterson, operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission.

Peterson told of "a feeling of helplessness" by rank and file union members in racketeered unions.

The testimony kicked off a new set of hearings in which the Senate Rackets Committee is investigating Chicago's racketeering in labor unions and alleged racketeer labor union dealings.

The hearing is part of an investigation into the activities of the Chicago Rackets Commission.

Eisenhower to Canada for a Trade Parley

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OTTAWA (AP)—The President's plane, the Columbine III, landed at 9:55 a.m. after a two-hour flight from Washington.

Top Canadian officials were on hand to greet the presidential party, which included Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Dulles.

The President's three-day stay north of the border is aimed at smoothing out irritations which have been disturbing the traditional friendship between the two great North American nations.

In conferences with Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, who invited him to make the trip, Eisenhower will explore economic and international issues.

The aim is closer understanding and some assurance that no insurmountable troubles divide the two nations.

There has been a growing resentment in Canada against the United States and its policies — a feeling that the neighbor to the south ignores Canadian problems or treats them in a casual, off-hand manner.

There have been some rumblings in the United States that Canada is shirking on providing manpower for Western defense.

"Many Canadians, for their part, complain that the United States is too much inclined to say 'no' to the Soviet Union and to decline to negotiate with the Soviets."

Mainly, Canada is concerned about economic issues. It worries about its trade deficit with the United States, heavy American investments dominating numerous Canadian industries, import limits on Canadian oil, U.S. sales of wheat abroad, the American boycott on trade with Red China, and the threat of higher tariffs on zinc and lead.

In the United States, the North-West is disturbed over a possibility of Canadian diversion of Columbia River waters.

Eisenhower will stay three days in the Canadian capital. Secretary of State Dulles and his Canadian counterpart Sidney E. Smith will sit in on at least part of the talks.

So will other officials.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Just before Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip flew to Canada last Columbus day, they were vaccinated against Asian flu, then aging in North America.

But President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles flying there today, have no such protection.

Temperatures for the month of July are expected to average above seasonal normals in the southern half of the country from the Rockies to the Atlantic. WASHINGTON (AP)—Statehood for Alaska now is up to the Alaskans themselves. And President Eisenhower almost forgot it.

He signed the Alaskan statehood bill Monday and commented: "Okay, now that's 49 states."

But he quickly corrected himself and said: "No, maybe we don't do that until the public's ready."

That was a reference to a provision in the bill requiring all Alaskans to vote whether they accept immediate statehood and terms of the bill itself.

Voting on acceptance, plus election of national and state officers, are the last remaining steps before issuance of a presidential proclamation—probably in December—formally admitting Alaska to the union.

Eisenhower urged Congress now to admit Hawaii as a state during this session.

"I personally believe that Hawaii is qualified for statehood equally with Alaska," he said.

18 Millions in Waterway Funds
LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Arkansas might get $18,000,000 of the funds in the 1½ billion dollar water program that President Eisenhower signed last week.

Allocation of the funds still was being discussed by a joint House-Senate group today.

Four major projects on the White and Little Red Rivers will come in for a share of the money. Army Engineers here said yesterday.

Tentative agreement has been reached in both chambers in allocating $100,000 for Bull Shoals, $12,400,000 for the Table Rock Dam project and $750,000 for Beaver Dam. House members want to earmark four million dollars for the Greer's Ferry project but Senate conferees recommended five millions.

tion. There is no handy vaccine to dispel what ails Canada in its relations with the United States. Sigmund Freud might have diagnosed it as an inferiority complex. But say that in Ottawa and you'll get a cross look, if not a right cross to the jaw. Ask almost any American and he's baffled, if he's thought about it at all. Chances are he takes Canada for granted.

Eisenhower and Dulles have thought about it a great deal, especially Dulles. It's mighty disconcerting for a secretary of state, wrestling with problems in not-so-friendly places far away, to have trouble erupt next door across the unpatrolled border in friendly Canada.

Dulles has had his share of this, mostly in the economic field. Canada has complained in recent years that the United States is hurting it by dumping surplus wheat on the world market, restricting Canadian oil imports, selling Canada more than it buys, and so on.

There is also the problem of security information. The Canadian Mounties have been supplying the FBI with security data on Canadian citizens for years. But Canada threatened to stop that last year after the Senate Internal Security subcommittee published a report naming one of her diplomats.

E. Herbert Norman, then Canada's ambassador to Egypt, committed suicide in Cairo after the committee said he had been active in Communist circles. Canada's indignant fury was enormous.

Eisenhower and Dulles are tackling all these problems with their Canadian counterparts at Ottawa. There is hope for progress, although the security issue is especially knotty since, under the U.S. Constitution, the executive branch can make no promises binding on the Congress.

The United States and Canada have been friendly so long that almost nobody remembers when they were enemies. American revolutionaries invaded Canada in 1775-76, took Montreal and besieged Quebec. Most Canadians are convinced Theodore Roosevelt bullied them into a disadvantageous settlement of the Alaska-Canada boundary in 1903. And some may be wondering today whether efforts might be made to acquire Canada's west coast for a land linkup with the 49th state.

It is not hard to argue for the theory of an inferiority complex.

Canada's radio reeks with rock 'n' roll. Canada's television leans to I Love Lucy and similar U. S. made programs, the books and even the magazines come overwhelmingly from the United States. Canadians talk like U. S. residents—those that don't talk French, that is—even though they swear allegiance to Queen Elizabeth.

Many may be satisfied with the situation but others would prefer that Canadians act more of a national identity.

quiry in which the committee is attempting to show a widespread effort by gangsters under direction of the Mafia Black Hand mob to infiltrate labor and industries across the nation.

Peterson linked with Capone mobsters the names of James Blakely, secretary-treasurer, and John Lardino, a business agent of Local 593 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union in Chicago.

He said such an association has been clear since a 1940 police raid on the local's headquarters rounded up Blakely, Lardino and Danny Stanton, "a notorious Capone gangster and a power in a number of unions" who was slain in gang warfare in 1943.

Chairman John T. McClellan (D-Ark) lined up big-time gangsters, the operators of some plush Chicago dining spots and labor union officials as major witnesses.

With this new set of hearings the committee seeks to portray in detail what it charged in last week's preliminary hearings—that a highly organized criminal syndicate under discipline of the Mafia Black Hand mob is gaining dangerous power over legitimate industries and labor unions from coast to coast.

There will be testimony about the still unsolved 1947 slaying of Nick De John, a Chicago racketeer who had moved into Dallas

Mrs. John House.

Mrs. Lera Johnson of Sherman, Texas was the holiday guest of her mother, Mrs. J. B. Munn.

Mrs. Jesse Crowe spent a part of last week in Little Rock as the guest of Mrs. Mattie Harris.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Delamar and Mrs. H. B. Delamar attended funeral services for Mrs. Charles Wilkerson at the Bethlehem Church here from Arkadelphia on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hays of Okolona were Saturday visitors in Prescott.

ruled yesterday that county quorum courts can hold special sessions to levy taxes approved at December school millage elections.

Such elections formerly were held in March but the 1957 Legislature changed the time to December so school districts could vote on the levies after property appraisals for the year were finished.

Bennett said that under state law, if a quorum court didn't complete its work on the regular meeting date of the third Monday in November, it could adjourn to a later time.

Therefore, he decided, quorum courts could resume sessions at a date following the school elections and on that date levy the tax voted at the polls.

and San Francisco, allegedly financed by loans from "the syndicate."

De John's body was found in the trunk of his car, parked in a San Francisco residential area. He had been garroted with wire, allegedly because he failed to pay back his loans.

McClellan, in a statement prepared for the opening of the hearing, said the committee would explore:

"1. Whether groups of employers banded together for the purposes of destroying legitimate unionization;

"2. Whether collusive deals were made between dishonest management and dishonest union officials;

"3. Whether gangsters or hoodlums were employed by an association of employers to keep out unionization or to handle their labor relations;

"4. Whether certain union officials have been or are presently in the control of the criminal syndicate in Chicago."

"I'm sorry to bother you with this one, doctor," said Inspector Winters. "But unless we nab this Natty Nat character soon, the newspapers will take us for a sleigh ride."

"You're satisfied it was Natty Nat's work?" asked Haledjian, using the nickname bestowed by reporters on the nattily dressed gunman who specialized in tailor shop holdups. In the past month he'd victimized a dozen.

"The description tallies with those given by the other victims," replied the inspector. "It's as if he's thumbing his nose at the whole police department."

"Mind if I question Browski?" inquired Haledjian.

"And you obeyed?"

"Of course. Last week Barney Fine didn't, and he got a bullet in the hip. Me, I wasn't taking any chances. When I looked around he was gone."

"Had you ever seen the man before?"

"Never. But I read the papers. This fellow had the same big stickpin in his tie, and the cashmere overcoat with the belted back and velvet collar, and the black homburg."

"How much did he steal?"

"Three thousand and sixty-eight dollars and twelve cents. I'd just counted the money. When the telephone rang, I shut the money in the register and went to the back to answer it."

"I'm certain you are insured against loss," said Haledjian. "But you can hardly expect me to support your claim."

Floor baskets of white gladioli decorated the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs.

White-Duffie Vows Pledg'd In Methodist Church

The wedding of Miss Lurline White, daughter of Mrs. J. W. White of Hope and Richard Rankin Duffie, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Duffie also of Hope, was an event of June 22, in the First Methodist Church. The Rev. Rufus Sorrells officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Tall baskets of white gladioli against a background of branched candelabra and jade trees formed the setting for the ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. B. C. Hyatt, organist. She accompanied Mrs. Maxine White, cousin of the bride who sang "O Promise Me" and "Because." The Lord's Prayer was sung as the benediction.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Jack, wore a wedding gown of Chantilly lace over tulle and taffeta designed with a mold-of bodice, scalloped Sabreina neckline which dipped to a point in the back. The long sleeves came to jilly points over the wrists and featured tiny self-covered buttons on the undersides. The full floor length skirt had a wide panel of lace down the back which ended in a chapel train. Her shoulder length veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls and sequins and she carried a white Bible centered with a white orchid showered with satin streamers. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bride-groom.

Mrs. Wayne Johnson of Grand Prairie, Texas, was matron of honor and Miss Vivian Ross, bridesmaid. They wore identical dresses of mint-green organza over taffeta, designed with full circular skirts and cowl necklines ending in streamers, down the back the length of the ballerina skirt. Their half-hats matched their gowns and were accented with circular face veils. They carried crescent bouquets of fuchsia carnations.

Don Duffie of Ponca City Oklahoma served his brother as best man. Ushers were Royce Barbaree of Hope, Jimmy Lowman, Leesville, La., Tom Yancy, North Little Rock, and Leo Morrison, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. For her daughters wedding Mrs. White wore a mauve silk dress with matching accessories and wore a white carnation corsage.

Mrs. Duffie, mother of the groom, was attired in a bisk imported Italian style dress, with white accessories and pinned a green orchid at her shoulder, lighted the candles.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlor. Greeting guests at the head of the receiving line was Mrs. B. B. McPherson. The serving table was overlaid with a white organdy cloth and centered with an all white arrangement of carnations and candy-tuft, and flanked by burning candles. Miss Bette Wilson of Prescott and Mrs. Donald Hucabee served the cake and Mrs. Jody Park of North Little Rock and Mrs. Jimmy Lowman of Leesville, La., presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. C. P. Moore, sister of the bride, was in charge of the brides book. Others in the house party included Mrs. Marie Hendrix and Mrs. Harry Hawthorne.

TOWN TAMER

By FRANK GRUBER

© 1957 by Frank Gruber. Distributed by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Tom Rosser is on trial for the murder of Flon, a high whom he caught hamstringing a horse. Because the town is controlled by Rosser's enemy Riley Condor, and the marshal and Judge are Condor's men, a fair trial seems unlikely. Suddenly Susan Tavener, the wife of one of Condor's gamblers, volunteers to testify.

Chapter CVIII
Susan pointed at Guy Tavener. "I heard him tell Mr. Rosser to go and look at his horse. I followed and saw what happened." A stunned silence fell upon the courtroom. Dr. Kent asked quickly, "What did you see, ma'am?"

"I saw that man... pointing at the hostler... lying on the floor unconscious and I heard the scream of Mr. Rosser's horse. Then I saw the big man come out of the stall with a bloody knife in his hand. A shudder shook Susan Tavener, but she went on. "I saw him coming toward Mr. Rosser and then—then I heard the gun go off—and the big man fell."

"Thank you," cried Dr. Kent in a ringing voice. "Thank you for telling the truth, ma'am!" He whirled on Judge Murcott. "Still want to go on with this trial, Judge?"
The judge stared openmouthed at Dr. Kent. Then Sheriff West Parker came out of the crowd. "I can verify most of what Mrs. Tavener said. I arrived at the livery stable just as Flon came out of the stall and went for Rosser. I was too far away to see if Flon still had the knife in his hand, but I want to point out, whether he had the knife or not, Flon's hands alone are lethal weapons. He's beaten some men in this town pretty badly. Crippled them, I believe Tom Rosser was fully justified in using his gun on Flon," he paused, drew a deep breath and added, "My recommendation is for what it is worth—is that Rosser be acquitted."

A sudden shout of approval went up in the courtroom. People surged forward. Judge Murcott saw what the overwhelming sentiment was and decided that discretion was his only hope.
He banged on the planks with his hammer and yelled, "Prisoner dismissed!"
Rosser left the courtroom accompanied by Dr. Kent, Josh Moody and Joe Laech. Some attempt was made at conversation, but Rosser replied in monosyllables and the others soon fell silent. All of them left him at the hotel.

Rosser walked to the huge railroad building that would later be the depot for Great Plains. Several freight wagons stood in front of the building and a crew was unloading the wagons and stacking up crates of supplies and equipment on the ground in front of the building. Rosser had difficulty finding a passage that would lead him to the door and inside, but managed it after a few moments.
Inside, Bill Daves was checking a stack of flour sack with the aid of a clerk.
"Rosser," he said, "heard about your trouble. Couldn't get to court myself, but I guess you got out of it all right."
"Not much," said Rosser. "I heard Mr. Fell's here."

Daves grimaced. "You, too. Everybody and his uncle'd like to see the Big boss. He's tied up right now."

Daves closed one eye in a great big wink and then the door of Fell's office opened and Susan Tavener came out. She was the last person in the world Rosser would have expected to see at this particular place, and it took him a full second before he was able to move forward.

"Mrs. Tavener!" he called.
She stopped, gave him a half-frightened smile that froze instantly.

"I've got to talk to you," he said.
"Later," she murmured.

Then Fell stepped out behind her. Susan saw him, started forward. "Yes," she said as she passed Rosser.

Fell was regarding Rosser as if he had never seen him before. "Mr. Fell," Rosser said. "I wonder if I could talk to you for a minute."

Fell scowled, look out his watch and glanced at it. "I'm pretty busy, but"—he frowned, made an impatient gesture—"if it's not too long..."

He went into the office and Rosser followed. Fell closed the door, then gripped Rosser's hand. "I see you've been working." He shook his head. "That was pretty raw this morning."

"I made a mistake," Rosser said. "I should have killed the marshal."

Fell scowled. "That bad?"
"They've got the town sewed up and down and crosswise."

"This man Flon..." Fell grimaced.
"Riley Condor's bodyguard. Condor built a frame-up, wanted me to kill Flon."

"His own Flon?"
"My guess is that he figured Flon had outlived his usefulness."

Rosser touched the bruises on his face.
Fell frowned and took a quick turn about the cluttered office, which had only two pieces of furniture, a desk made of rough lumber and a straight-backed chair. The rest of the room was piled high with cartons, boxes, crates.

Rosser watched him a moment. "There's something I think you ought to know. Certain citizens of this town are preparing to organize a vigilante committee."

Fell wheeled, his mouth agape for an instant. Then his eyes blazed. "Anything but that!" A shudder seemed to shake him. "They still remember the Alder Gulch Vigilantes."

Candidate

is prepared and finalized at headquarters, while the man himself is whirling around the state on speaking engagements. Campaign contributions are accepted here and bulk mailings are dispatched. Each candidate has the aid of a professional advertising agency in matters of press releases, television appearances and paid political advertising but the bulk of the work is done by office, personnel and volunteers, both at the state headquarters and in the various county and district headquarters scattered over the state.

County volunteers take care of arranging speaking dates, meeting and escorting the candidate when he arrives and the placing of advertising in the county papers announcing his appearance. In most cases, the candidate's friends in the county also pay for the advertising space.

Ward and Faubus work through county chairmen. Finkbeiner's team has divided the state into 14 districts and works through district chairmen.

Although personal contact with the candidate is rare, state headquarters maintains constant telephone contact—advising the candidate of developments and obtaining his approval in ideas.

Both Faubus and Ward are spending nights on the road in order to be nearer the first stop of the morning. Finkbeiner, who is using an airplane to make his engagements, is a more frequent visitor at his headquarters.

"We usually see Chris for a few minutes each day," Williams said. "He tries to get back to Little Rock every night."

Ward, who is traveling by helicopter, has created a king-sized headache for his workers. "We have to hunt up the proper city officials to obtain permission for the helicopter to land," Sloan said. "Sometimes that takes a while, but it pays off in giving Judge Ward better mobility than the other candidates."

Faubus travels by auto and his appearances in Little Rock are consequently less frequent than those of either Ward or Finkbeiner.

The one thing shared by all headquarters—and all candidates—is confidence.

Each worker—from campaign manager to typist—in each headquarters will tell you quickly and firmly that his man is going to be the next governor of Arkansas.
